

Afterschool Progress Report and Consumer Guide: Nebraska

How Nebraska is Helping to Keep the Lights on After School

Afterschool in Nebraska

While Nebraska has made some progress with afterschool - particularly in terms of access and satisfaction among parents - in many respects the state still trails the national averages and has failed to make progress on several measures. The most notable of which is Nebraska's 36 percent rate of kids in self-care. Based on the data and the need for more attention to afterschool among state leaders, it is apparent that Nebraska needs increased resources to ensure that more students are able to enjoy the state's quality afterschool offerings.

Consumer Guide: Nebraska

For many adults in America, thinking about the hours after the school day ends conjures up memories of doing homework, playing pick-up basketball, taking guitar or dance lessons or going home to Mom and a snack. But for millions of children today, those images are nothing like their reality. In fact, each day in America, more than 15 million children—some as young as 5 years old—are without supervision at home or on the streets.

Methodology:

The 2011 State-by-State Progress Reports and Consumer Guides are sponsored by jcpenny. Scores for the Progress Reports were devised using a range of factors falling under three major categories: Growth in Afterschool Participation, Developments in State Afterschool Policy and Funding and Advancements in State Afterschool Leadership. Data from the America After 3PM survey, also sponsored by jcpenny, was used in assessing the afterschool participation portion of the Progress Reports. Between March and May 2009, 29,754 parents/guardians were surveyed for America After 3PM. The remainder of the Progress Reports and Consumer Guides were created utilizing up to date policy and leadership developments obtained from afterschool leaders in the states, most notably the forty statewide afterschool networks. The 2011 State-by-State Progress Reports and Consumer Guides reflect the data and resources available at the time of their release in October 2011.
