Call and response: Afterschool programs stepping up during the pandemic

From the outset of the pandemic, afterschool programs have adapted and expanded their services to best meet the needs of the children and families they serve. 826DC helps students process their feelings about COVID-19 through virtual creative writing projects. They provide writing materials and pre-recorded workshops, as well as work with some students one-on-one (virtually) to help them turn their writing into professional publications. In Charlotte, North Carolina, ourBRIDGE for KIDS distributed tens of thousands of meals and served as a liaison between schools and families, translating materials for parents, the majority of whom are English Language Learners.

A 2021 national survey of afterschool providers finds programs continue to provide:

Support is strong and bipartisan

A national survey of parents in the fall of 2020 found that as the pandemic continued to disrupt school schedules, most parents were concerned about their child’s social and emotional well-being and connection to peers, as well as their own ability to continue to provide learning support and/or care for their child as virtual school and distance learning extends into 2021.

Based on the 2020 America After 3PM household survey, parents in the District of Columbia agree that afterschool programs:

- Build positive relationships between children and adults 72%
- Keep kids safe and out of trouble 83%
- Help working parents keep their jobs 84%
- Provide working parents peace of mind 90%

A smart investment

Research spanning several states shows that every $1 invested in afterschool programs saves at least $3 by:

1. Increasing kids’ earning potential
2. Improving kids’ performance at school
3. Reducing crime and juvenile delinquency

Additionally, Community Learning Centers leverage diverse partners to meet community needs. A typical program receives $67,000 from partners to supplement its federal funding. Nationwide, partner contributions totaled more than $1 billion between 2006 and 2010.

The 2020 Department of Education annual performance report of 21st CCLC found that among regular participants:

- Nearly half improved their math (48%) and English grades (48%)
- 69% improved homework completion and class participation
- 62% improved their behavior

Parents in the District of Columbia are behind public investment in afterschool programs

- 89% of parents favor public funding of afterschool programs to expand opportunities for kids in underserved communities.

Support is strong and bipartisan

- 92% Democrats
- 76% Independents
- 97% Republicans
