A 2019 evaluation of Washington's 21st CCLC programs by the American Institutes for Research found that students who consistently attended programs and were in need of improvement had a higher percentage of credits earned, cumulative GPA, and a lower number of school day absences compared to non-attendees. Additionally, most students in the programs agreed that the program helped them with their interpersonal skills (87%) and academic behavior (81%).

Parents in Washington agree that afterschool programs:

- Provide opportunities to build life skills 82%
- Get kids excited about learning 75%
- Reduce the likelihood that youth will use drugs or engage in other risky behaviors 79%

Call and response: Afterschool programs stepping up during the pandemic

From the outset of the pandemic, afterschool programs have adapted and expanded their services to best meet the needs of the children and families they serve. In Bellingham, the Whatcom Family YMCA remained open for children of essential workers, and mobilized to provide food, emergency care, and remote learning support for families. The Walla Walla 21st Century Community Learning Center found creative ways to keep students engaged virtually, from discussing pop culture to connecting over online games.

A 2021 national survey of afterschool providers finds programs continue to provide:

21st Century Community Learning Centers

21st Century Community Learning Centers (21st CCLC) are local before-school, afterschool, and summer learning programs that serve students attending high-poverty, low-performing schools, engaging students in hands-on learning activities aimed at supporting their academic growth. They provide a variety of enrichment activities to complement school-day learning and offer educational and support services to the families of participating children.

In Washington, 6,267 children in 140 communities take part in a Community Learning Center.

21st CCLC grants are the only dedicated federal funding source that support local communities’ afterschool and summer programs.

The 2020 Department of Education annual performance report of 21st CCLC found that among regular participants:

- Nearly half improved their math (48%) and English grades (48%)
- 69% improved homework completion and class participation
- 62% improved their behavior

A lifeline for working families

A national survey of parents in the fall of 2020 found that as the pandemic continued to disrupt school schedules, most parents were concerned about their child’s social and emotional well-being and connection to peers, as well as their own ability to continue to provide learning support and/or care for their child as virtual school and distance learning extends into 2021.

Based on the 2020 America After 3PM household survey, parents in Washington agree that afterschool programs:

- Build positive relationships between children and adults 80%
- Keep kids safe and out of trouble 78%
- Help working parents keep their jobs 82%
- Provide working parents peace of mind 83%

A smart investment

Research spanning several states shows that every $1 invested in afterschool programs saves at least $3 by:

1. Increasing kids’ earning potential
2. Improving kids’ performance at school
3. Reducing crime and juvenile delinquency

Additionally, Community Learning Centers leverage diverse partners to meet community needs. A typical program receives $67,000 from partners to supplement its federal funding. Nationwide, partner contributions totaled more than $1 billion between 2006 and 2010.
