The Challenge to Reopen Schools: New Survey, to Be Released Thursday, Examines Role Out-of-School-Time Programs Are Playing in the Pandemic and How They Can Help Educate Students and Support Families This Fall

On Thursday, July 23, at 11:30 am ET, the Afterschool Alliance will release the results of a national survey of afterschool and summer program providers that explores how these programs have stepped up to support students and families during the pandemic, and looks at their funding, stability, and how they can support schools and families this Fall.

National afterschool experts as well as providers from Kansas, Rhode Island and Texas will release the results and discuss the role out-of-school-time programs can play as schools reopen this fall and the challenges these programs are facing. The out-of-school-time program survey results will be released:

Thursday, July 23 at 11:30 am Eastern Time
Via a Zoom Briefing Featuring
Jodi Grant, Executive Director, Afterschool Alliance
Ayana Melvan, United Way of Rhode Island and Rhode Island Afterschool Network
Miguel Garcia, Fort Worth Afterschool, Fort Worth Independent School District, Texas
Tony Yungeberg, Valley Heights Community Education, Kansas
Nikki Yamashiro, Vice President of Research, Afterschool Alliance
