Urge Congress to Fully Fund Afterschool Programs*

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Afterschool Alliance today honored Sandra McBrayer, Chief Executive Officer of the Children's Initiative, for her support for afterschool programs at a gala event in Washington, D.C. At the Breakfast of Champions, the Afterschool Alliance honored Atlanta Falcons star quarterback Michael Vick for his work on behalf of disadvantaged children, as well as eight individuals and the New Hampshire Department of Education for ongoing work on behalf of afterschool programs. Members of Congress scheduled to speak include Senators Saxby Chambliss (R-GA), Johnny Isakson (R-GA), John Kerry (D-MA) and John E. Sununu (R-NH), as well as Representatives Dale Kildee (D-MI) and Nita Lowey (D-NY).

McBrayer has been a national and state afterschool champion for more than ten years, according to the California Afterschool Network. She was appointed by California Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger in 2006 to chair the State Advisory Committee for Before and After School Programs. In that capacity, she works with the Governor of California, the California Department of Education, the Office of the Secretary of Education and state legislators to implement Proposition 49. She has led efforts to generate more than $550 million in state funding and more than $121 million in federal funding for before- and afterschool programs throughout California.

The Breakfast of Champions is part of the sixth annual "Afterschool for All Challenge" which brings together hundreds of parents, educators, children, program directors and advocates from around the country for a series of events and meetings with Members of Congress. Following the Breakfast, the advocates fanned out across Capitol Hill for meetings with their Senators and Representatives, and congressional staff.

"We know that afterschool programs keep kids safe, help working families and inspire student learning," said Afterschool Alliance Executive Director Jodi Grant. "But every day, 14.3 million children take care of themselves after school. If programs were available, an additional 15 million kids would participate, but at the rate we're going, they're never going to get that chance. Federal funding shortfalls have undercut the promise of afterschool. We're in our nation's capital to remind lawmakers that all kids need the opportunities and experiences that afterschool programs provide and that they and their families are relying on Congress to help support these programs.”

The bipartisan No Child Left Behind Act authorized $2.5 billion for the 21st Century Community Learning Centers afterschool initiative in FY 2007, but funding has fallen far short of authorized levels. It was funded at just $981 million this year – more than $20 million in real cuts to the funding provided in 2002.

Other state champions honored were: Connecticut’s Tom Buckley of AT&T; Camille McCashland of the Office of the Governor in Idaho; Kansas State Senator Laura Kelly; Maine State Representative Chris Barstow; Massachusetts State Representative Robert DeLeo; Commissioner Lyonel B. Tracy on behalf of the New Hampshire Department of Education; James Shaw of the Mayor’s Coalition to Prevent Juvenile Crime in Florence, South Carolina; and Afterschool advocate Joan Yoshitomi of Washington State.
